RSL lays the foundations for a new era at City

A big name player in Resin Surface Limited's (RSL) range of products has been brought in to fill a central role at Manchester City for next season. The specialist resin manufacturer has supplied its Resucoat HB range in a bespoke sky blue colour, for use around the City of Manchester Stadium's wide concourses and toilet blocks.

The City of Manchester Stadium has been in constant use since the Manchester Commonwealth Games in 2002, hosting Premier League football and some of the biggest outdoor concerts Manchester has held, and as a result, the grey concrete floors throughout the stadium were becoming worn, losing the protective finish.

RSL supplied Resucoat HB for use across the 12,000 sq metres of concourses and facilities of the stadium, as it is an easy to apply over large areas, hard-wearing product which cures quickly and is simple to maintain. An anti-slip agent can also be included to ensure maximum safety for the thousands of people who will use the concourses over the course of a season.

RSL supplied the product in a bespoke sky blue to match Manchester City's colours, and the coloured high gloss finish is extremely hard wearing, with good general chemical resistance. This will allow the surface to be regularly cleaned without damaging the finish. Fans will get the chance to see the new floors when Manchester City kicks off the new season in August.

Ivy Wroe, managing director at RSL commented: "This is a fantastic project for RSL, and we take a lot of pride, as a local manufacturer, that Manchester City chose to use our products. RSL has been involved in a number of installations in some top class sporting venues, such as the Bolton Reebok Arena, and our range of Resucoats, and new line of innovative products, such as Resufloor Cristalbright, are ideal in these settings where function and colour is a must. We look forward to working with Manchester City again in the future."
