

RSL Website press release

Resin Surfaces Limited (RSL) has recently launched its brand new website specially designed to provide a valuable resin flooring resource for all architects, specifiers and contractors. As a market leader in resin systems, RSL realised it was important to share its expertise in resin products and this is reflected in the new website.

The website is extremely user friendly, guiding you through the extensive product range, with advice and guidance on where each product can be used. Each product page provides a comprehensive data sheet together with case studies and examples of where the product can be used. The new dedicated architects section includes specification advice and an up to date CPD programme.

The new website reflects RSL's fresh new brand and reinforces its industry leading position. RSL's Managing Director, Ivy Wroe commented:

'We wanted to provide a valuable reference point for contractors to use when specifying a resin system. We ensured the site is user friendly whilst providing comprehensive information on resin systems.'

'We have always been passionate about the resin industry and wanted this to come across in our new website. We have also introduced a topical news blog where our staff can keep you up to date with the latest industry news.'

The new website is just in time for a major product launch, so keep your eye out for the release of an exciting new product range which will make RSL your number one choice for resin flooring systems.

The new website can be found at www.resinsurfaces.co.uk
