

NVQ Success for FeRFA contractor The Preparation Group

The first four apprentices to achieve their NVQ in Prepare and Profile Substrates will be honoured at FeRFA's AGM on 19 November.

The candidates, Levi Cross, John Denton, Paul Lynch and Jamie Williams all from the Lincoln based surface preparation contractor The Preparation Group have attained their NVQ level 2, FeRFA certificate and ID badge.

Tracey Glew, Managing Director of the company said: "The apprenticeship in surface preparation is helping to raise standards within the industry which, until its launch, had not been recognised as a specialist skill, yet is vital to the success of the finished floor. From the outset we have been keen to support the scheme both with our input and by providing training facilities. John Glew who, together with Terry Foxley, delivers the training modules to candidates was one of the first approved trainers for this particular apprenticeship scheme."

As part of FeRFA's 40th Anniversary celebrations the achievements of recent resin flooring apprentices, Dominic Mitchell of Kemtile, Matthew Preston of Respol and Ben Gillway of Midland Industrial Flooring will also be recognised at the awards ceremony at Forest of Arden Hotel on 19 November.
